

Set the tone of your Lingerie with color

While underwear is just merely underwear, lingerie has become so much more. It can, and should, be thought of as a vital piece of underwear. While still crucial to those intimate nights, lingerie has become the perfect way of increasing your confidence. Thankfully it is now something that is widely sought after by most women for this purpose. Regardless of whether you prefer corsets, babydolls, garter belts or simply a matching set of bra and panties -- you need lingerie to be a part of your overall wardrobe. Women everywhere are breaking free from the constraints of just wearing it for the sake of a special occasion.

Today's woman has no excuse not to have a lingerie collection. The lingerie market is massive and is flooded with a seemingly endless array of choices. Everything from leather to lace or babydolls to peak-a-boo cut outs, the choice of what you wear is limited only by your mood and personality. Choose pieces that you want to wear and that you feel the most comfortable in. Remember lingerie is designed to emphasize your best assets, not draw attention to those areas you aren't happy with, so go with pieces that make the most of what you have and you will always look and feel stunning.

The material, the cut and the fit are all considerations you need to address when it comes to selecting lingerie, but don't overlook the importance of color. The colors of the garments you choose are very important. They set the tone of the entire look. Color can say a lot about you and can send a barrage of signals, so getting this right is critical.

Lingerie, not unlike ice cream, comes in three main flavors of color. Sure there are endless variations, but you just can't go wrong with red, black, or white. Some women are actually quick to dismiss white, thinking it too girly - but that's actually the point.

Lace, embroidery and tiny embellishments all come together in the most alluring way. There is something very clean feeling and elegant about it. White is the best color option for those of you who want to reflect a tone of softness. It's best employed when you'd like to stretch out that just out of the shower feeling. There are times in life, when we'd like to take off that armor of ours and not be so strong for a day - white gives us that essential break from the rigors of being a woman of today.

Sexy and dramatic red can scream a night of passion, but it is so much more. While Red can defiantly set pulses racing, it's all about the excitement and energy it embodies. Red is that dangerous secret that gets you through your day. Think of it as batteries for your power suit.

Just like your little black dress, black lingerie is something that should always make an appearance in any underwear arsenal. Being both sexy and romantic you can create a number of moods and always look fabulous. Also the great thing about black lingerie is the fact it can be worn under most clothing. Black is our versatile friend when we don't know what intrigue the day will bring.

Never underestimate the power color can have over your mood and the atmosphere you can create with the use of it. So next time you are buying lingerie you may want to put color at the top of your list of considerations.

About the Author

In addition to her freelance projects, Wynter Stark is a copyright writer for Touch of That Lingerie. A student of both fashion and life, her approach to both is all about the journey.

Source: <http://www.kiarticle.info>